Lionel Dany (Aix-Marseille University, France)

The 13th edition of the International Conference on Social Representations (ICSR) was held in Marseille (France) from 14 to 17 September 2016. The guiding theme of the event was: "Epistemologies of everyday life". This 13th ICSR edition aimed at raising awareness about the pertinence of the social representations theory to achieving a better understanding of the social dynamics permeating everyday realities.

In association with the editors of Papers on Social Representations, the organization of the 13th ICSR wish to propose a special issue which can provide an opportunity for disseminating some of the works presented during the conference.

All participants to the 13th ICSR can submit their manuscript for this special issue according to the thematic fields of the conference. This special issue is intended to deepen specific theoretical and methodological issues raised from the theory of social representations, as well as the contribution of the social representations perspective for the understanding of contemporary issues (e.g., environment, health, globalization social changes, education, security, and so on).

In addition to this 'open' call for papers, the organization of the 13th ICSR wish to highlight 2 specific thematics for this special issue: (1) Mediterranean societies and (2) Social representations and professional practices in the socio-medical field.

Papers should be submitted according to Papers on Social Representations submission guidelines (see <http://www.psych.lse.ac.uk/psr/>). All submitted papers (between 3000 and 7000 words) will be peer reviewed for publication on the understanding that they have not been previously published elsewhere and are not currently under consideration for publication elsewhere.

Those interested in contributing to this special issue can contact the guest editors for information: Themistoklis Apostolidis (Themistoklis.Apostolidis@univ-amu.fr); Lionel Dany (Lionel.Dany@univ-amu.fr).

The deadline for submissions is 15th July 2017
